The problem sometimes arises due to the battery issue, so try the following steps: • Switch off your phone and let it be off for about a couple of minutes.. It may cause network failure because of the changes in radio propagation resulting from the clouds, precipitation and temperature inversions.. These areas are known as dead zones and lack any kind of mobile network coverage because of the unavailability of the network between handset and mobile site antennas.. The volume of the network traffic in a region is also one of the primary reasons for the unavailability of the network..
